Thiruppugazh songs that name Shiva or tell a story of Shiva: stories and sources

309 songs, 238 with an identified story, 20 stories. Part A is by song number: the verse, then the story, then every reference. Part B is by story, with the Tamil Shaiva verses and their links. Primary-text references are Sanskrit (Puranas, Mahabharata, Ramayana) and the Tamil Shaiva texts (Tevaram, Tiruvasagam, Periya Puranam, Kanda Puranam); each is marked confirmed only when its page was opened and read. The shortlist rule is keyword-based and was refined by reading every song; songs that only name Shiva or call Murugan his son are in Part C.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Ganesha shattered the axle of the chariot of Shiva who burned the three cities (முப்புரமெரிசெய்த அச்சிவன் உறை ரதம் அச்சு பொடிசெய்த)

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Laughed and destroyed the cities; danced in the hall holding the axe (புரம் சிரித்துக் கொன்றிடும்... மன்றினிலாடி மழுக்கைக்கொண்ட சங்கரர்)

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match h]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Reading note: Sambandar healed the Pandya's fever with ash; Jains impaled; Nakkeerar helped by Murugan

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match h]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match m]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Sambandar of Pugali scattered holy ash and defeated the Jains; son of him who burned the cities with his laugh

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match h]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match m]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match I]
Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).
Reading note: Devi taking the bow against the cities (Narayani hymn)

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Destroyed the cities, flayed the elephant, cut off angry Daksha's head, learned the true meaning in his ear from Murugan; Chidambaram

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Burned the cities; Devi Sankari in his half

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match m]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Salutation to the Lord who burned the cities, Hara Hara

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Laughed and burned Kama and the cities with the fire from his eye

> கரிபு ராரி காமாரி திரிபு ராரி தீயாடி

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match m]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Epithet list of Shiva: elephant-slayer, Kama's foe, burner of the three cities, dancer in fire, Lord of Kailasa, Kapali

Bhagavata Purana	SB 7.10.51-69	Narada tells how Maya built the three cities of gold, silver and iron; Shiva's arrows burn them, Maya revives the dead in a nectar well, Vishnu intervenes
Mahabharata (Critical Edition)	MBh 8,24 (esp. 8,24.114-115)	Karna parva: Shiva with the Pashupata missile and the divine chariot burns the Tripura; told as a model for Karna's chariot
Mahabharata (Critical Edition)	MBh 7,173.37; 13,14.128	Short allusions: Shiva as destroyer of Tripura
Valmiki Ramayana	Ramayana 1.75.12-16	Allusion: Shiva's bow given by the gods for the Tripura fight; Shiva-Vishnu bow contest
Linga Purana	Linga Purana 1.71-72 (wisdomlib Sec.1 ch.71-72)	Nandikeshvara narrates the Tripura demons and the construction of Rudra's chariot for their burning
Shiva Purana	Shiva Purana, Rudra-samhita 5 (Yuddha-khanda) ch.1, 3, 4, 10	The three cities, the Tripuras' virtue and Vishnu's guile, and the burning of the Tripuras

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Bent the Meru and bound the serpent to burn the cities; pushed away Yama; reduced Kama to ash; destroyed Daksha's sacrifice and gave a goat's head; the Jains impaled

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Reduced the mighty three cities to ash and smoke

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match m]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Plucked the middle head of the lotus Brahma and begged with it; laughed and burned the cities; Siva with Uma

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match I]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Son of Purari who burned the cities

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]
Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Carried the sand of the Vaigai in Madurai with an axe; father burned the cities and rules Siva-loka; Sivakami who raged at Yama

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Plucked Brahma's head with a nail; smiled and burned the cities

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match m]
The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]
Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Purari burned the cities with a smile before Meru bent; eyes that burned Kama; Ganga

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match h]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Reading note: Stake for the Jains, the Pandya cured of hunch and wearing ash, the Devi of Alavai

Tamil Shaiva texts	Periya Puranam (Sekkizhar, Tirumurai 12) Sambandar puranam (PP no. 28), verse 2	சென்னிவளர் மதியணிந்த சிலம்பணிசே வடியார்தம் Kazhumalam, a name of Sirkazhi (Pugali), the Chola-land town where Sambandar is born.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Burned the three cities in a moment, Siva's son

Bhagavata Purana	SB 7.10.51-69	Narada tells how Maya built the three cities of gold, silver and iron; Shiva's arrows burn them, Maya revives the dead in a nectar well, Vishnu intervenes
Mahabharata (Critical Edition)	MBh 8,24 (esp. 8,24.114-115)	Karna parva: Shiva with the Pashupata missile and the divine chariot burns the Tripura; told as a model for Karna's chariot

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Laughed and burned the cities, kicked Yama, destroyed Kama, held the ocean's poison in his throat; Siva's grace to Murugan

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]
Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match m]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match m]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Burning of the three cities (Tripura) [match h]

Three flying cities of the demons Tarakaksha, Kamalaksha and Vidyunmali made them unconquerable. The gods made Shiva a chariot: Meru the bow, Vishnu the arrow, Vasuki the string. When the cities aligned he destroyed them with one smile or arrow. A Tamil tradition has Ganesha breaking the chariot's axle before the battle (song 1).

Reading note: Became the Guru and spoke in Hara's one ear; Kali burns the cities

Bhagavata Purana	SB 7.10.51-69	Narada tells how Maya built the three cities of gold, silver and iron; Shiva's arrows burn them, Maya revives the dead in a nectar well, Vishnu intervenes

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match h]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Story: Sambandar and the Jains [match m]

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.

Reading note: First Guru of Saivism, destroyed the Jains

Saints and the sacred sports

Sambandar and the Jains · 20 songs: 17, 104, 149, 150, 261, 540, 542, 550, 617, 668, 762, 766, 799, 913, 920, 959, 1209, 1282, 1287, 1327

The child saint Sambandar of Sirkazhi, nursed with Uma's milk, went to Madurai, healed the Pandya's fever with holy ash and defeated the Jains in debate and contests (a fire test, a palm-leaf floating against the Vaigai). Tradition says the Jains were then impaled on the stake; the Thiruppugazh often adds this.
